

Helping Wildlife Survive

The single most important thing an animal needs for long-term survival is good habitat.... a healthy place to live. Providing and protecting wildlife habitat is our responsibility.

Long-eared owl, Colorado

Girl photographing wildflowers

Humans connect with those things they love and understand. Forming a positive attitude about nature at an early age is vital to maintaining an environmentally friendly culture. This program gives examples of how students can "connect" in a positive way to nature.

Boy watching wildlife

Family hiking on Mt. Evans, Colorado

How we live on a day-to-day basis greatly impacts the environment.

The future of polar bears and many other species of wildlife is directly related to energy consumption. Practical ideas for reducing our impact on the environment are covered.

Polar bears, Canadian Arctic

Visit Perry's web site, www.perryconway.com, and click on Multi-Media Wildlife Programs for additional programs and information. Presentations are adaptable for K-8 and always include LIVE ANIMALS.

Aerie Nature Series, Inc. ■ PO Box 303, Louisville, CO 80027
303.499.7256 (phone) ■ 303.499.0603 (fax) ■ perry@perryconway.com